Religions of the World

The vital connection between faith and action is essential to an understanding of human history. Religious studies explore the answers people have given to the perennial questions and the expression of them in our personal lives and in the life of society. This course is a comparative overview of the most prominent living religions. Course will survey major systems of religious behavior: Hinduism, Buddhism, Taoism, Confucianism, Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Course will look at the impact of religion on international events and issues as well as religious diversity in the media. The goal of the course is to gain a broad understanding of the important role of religion both in individual human experience and in the life of society.
